4 of 7 review helpful Big disappointment By Joan On the front of this book it says spine tingling tales to tell in the dark I guess it is spine tingling if you were frightened to read The Cat In The Hat I stuck with reading the book to the end thinking that surely there must be a scary story somewhere there I was wrong Just a waste of money and time for this book 15 of 16 review helpful The Sun has set the campfire is lit and dark night presses in suddenly the wilderness seems very big and very scary In the good old fashioned tradition of story telling The Campfire Collection offers twenty five spine tingling tales both true and fictional of the human experience in the great outdoors From beastly attacks to brushes with death and supernatural encounters this anthology captures the cruel sometimes macabre side of Mother Nature From School Library Journal Adult High School A collection of 17 tales some true life some fiction some excerpted from longer works The most famous story is Jack London s To Build a Fire Others deal with mountain climbing peril at sea exploring the Col
